Another Kind of Court

The Trouble With the Overhead Smash

In the 35 years I've played tennis, I'd never hit anyone with an overhead smash. This is pretty impressive because a lot of players lack control when they bring the racket overhead to hit the ball. At least, it used to be impressive. Then my friend jinxed me. We were talking before a game, and she was shocked to hear that I'd never hit anyone with an overhead smash. She didn't even believe me at first.

Of course, in that match, her partner popped the ball up and I hit her in the foot with an overhead smash. It was just her foot, so she was fine, but she's never let me forget it. Before every game we play now, she asks if I'm going to hit her with an overhead smash. I haven't done it a second time, but my perfect record is still gone forever.

Tennis has been a big part of my life. Back in the '80s, my summers were filled with tennis, tennis, and more tennis. My mom would drop me and my younger brother off and we played tennis all morning, ate lunch, then spent the afternoon in the pool until Mom came to pick us up. There were times when my brother and I begged to do something else, but our parents insisted that tennis was a "life sport." Turns out, they were right. Thirty years later, I'm still playing tennis several times a week.

I haven't been playing for 30 years straight, of course. I was captain of the tennis team in high school, but I didn't play much in college. Then in law school, I played even less. It was really hard to get court time in New York City. There was a local club with two courts on the roof that we used from time to time, but it wasn't consistently available. After finishing law school, I was suddenly busy being a new lawyer. I wouldn't have had time to play even if I had my own private court!

Tennis didn't become a big part of my life again until my family moved to the suburbs in New Jersey. Once we settled in, I discovered that the town had a strong adult rec program that included a tennis league. They even had free lessons on Sunday afternoons for people who wanted to try it out. I signed up for the lessons, and I'm glad I did. I was terrible at first! It had been years since I'd played, and my shots were all over the place (it got so bad that I was actually serving underhanded). But with time, I got that muscle memory back. You won't see me at Wimbledon, but I can hold my own in a game.

These days, tennis is one of my most reliable strategies for stress relief. I like that it takes my whole focus. It doesn't matter how difficult my day was, when I'm on the tennis court, nothing exists outside the lines on the court. I can focus on the game and get a good workout while playing. Afterward, life seems a bit lighter.

If you've ever thought about playing tennis, I highly recommend it, though I know it can seem intimidating from the outside. If you want to get into the sport, there are plenty of opportunities to get started. Check for clubs or rec leagues in your area that offer lessons. To be honest, all you really need is a court, a racket, and a tube of balls, and you can play as long as you want. I have some friends who just play together at their gym. They aren't interested in competing on teams; they just want to have fun together.

Tennis is the kind of game that's easy to get into and a lot of fun to play. If you can, I suggest giving it a try this summer. You might have a lot of fun. Just be careful with that overhead smash.

THE PROS AND CONS OF BUYING A HOME IN A 55-PLUS COMMUNITY

Depending on your wants and needs, buying a home in a 55-plus community might be a financially savvy way to set yourself up for retirement. But is it the right decision for you? Here are a few financial pros and cons associated with moving into one of these neighborhoods.

PRO: THE HOMES ARE IN EXCELLENT CONDITION.

Oftentimes, 55-plus communities provide maintenance services, including housekeeping and landscaping. Also, it's likely that only a handful of people have occupied the home since it was built, so buying in a 55-plus community means you'll get a property in excellent condition with less wear and tear.

CON: YOU'LL HAVE TO PAY A MONTHLY FEE.

Unfortunately, all the great stuff doesn't come free. Usually, you'll have to pay an extra monthly bill, similar to a homeowners association fee, to live in a 55-plus community. Some communities include all maintenance and amenities in the monthly rent or mortgage (some even cover utility bills), but make sure you understand what is and isn't covered before you sign a contract!

PRO: AMENITIES ARE INCLUDED.

Most 55-plus communities include amenities like exercise classes and educational programs for their residents. They also invite community organizations and leaders to speak about local issues or upcoming elections. Some even have a clubhouse or dining hall for social gatherings. Save money by taking advantage of these programs instead of paying for a gym membership or a course at the local community college.

CON: IT'S A LIMITED BUYER'S AND RENTER'S MARKET.

Most people who buy in a 55-plus community plan to retire there. If this is your original intention but your plans change down the road, you might have a harder time selling your home here than you would in a community that is open to people of all ages. Make sure to budget for those potential holding costs and plan accordingly.

Regardless of where you decide to buy, be sure to consult an experienced real estate agent and a financial planner. Here's to living out your golden years in comfort and convenience!

THE $60,000 HEIST YOU'VE NEVER HEARD OF Crimeless Theft in Cyberspace

In 2017, sometime between Sept. 11 and 12, a total of $60,000 worth of digital assets were stolen from people around the world. The conspirators didn't hide their identities, and they faced no criminal charges. As it turns out, there are no laws against stealing spaceships in a video game — even if they're worth thousands of real-world dollars.

EVE Online is a massively multiplayer online game (MMO) that was launched in 2003, and it was on this game that the theft occurred. This science-fiction game is all about spacefaring, but one notable feature of the game is that it allows players to purchase in-game assets with real money. This attracts players who can spend large sums on the game, with some of the game's largest spaceships costing $9,000. But one thing to note in EVE Online is that no matter how much you pay, once you lose an asset, it's gone forever.

Because of the risk-reward nature of the game, many players unite in huge factions for safety and to pool their resources. One of these groups, Circle of Two or CO2, was the target of the 2017 attack. Within a matter of hours, CO2's bank accounts were drained and the space stations holding their fleets of ships were sold to their enemies. It was clear from the beginning: This was an inside job.

The thief was CO2's own head diplomat, a player called "The Judge." For years he'd worked his way through the alliance's ranks, only to use the access he eventually gained to rob it blind. But greed may not have been his only motivation. He'd had public disagreements with CO2's leader called Gigx, and a rival faction was able to capitalize on this internal conflict. During an in-person EVE Online summit held in Iceland, representatives from The GoonSwarm Federation convinced The Judge to leave CO2 and commit the single largest robbery in gaming history on his way out.

In the real world, The Judge's actions were completely legal — currently, international law doesn't treat such virtual objects as personal property. But this perception may be changing. As in-game purchases become more widespread in video games, legal lines have blurred, causing an increasing number of lawmakers to rethink what constitutes "ownership" in the digital age. But, for now at least, it seems like a good time to be a space pirate.

THE STORY OF GRANDPA MASON

How a Feral Cat Came to Care for Orphaned Kittens

When cats are orphaned as kittens, they don't get the chance to develop all the skills needed to become successful cats. Just like human children, kittens need older role models too. The most famous cat role model had a rough start in life but became an inspiration for kittens and humans alike. His name was Grandpa Mason, and during the last years of his life, he stepped up and gave love, care, and guidance to the orphaned kittens that lived with him.

The Canadian animal rescue group TinyKittens rescued Grandpa Mason in 2016 from a property that was scheduled to be bulldozed. The poor feral tabby was suffering from many health problems, including severe dental issues, a badly injured paw, and advanced kidney disease. Since TinyKittens is a no-kill rescue organization, euthanization was out of the question.

Given his health conditions, veterinarians predicted the battle-scarred Grandpa Mason didn't have long to live, so TinyKittens' founder, Shelly Roche, took him in and provided him with a comfortable place to sleep, plenty of food, and time to relax in the last months of his life. Grandpa Mason had a hard time adjusting to domestic life and would often shy away from being petted. In an interview with The Dodo, Roche described him as "an elderly gentleman [who] lived his whole life a certain way, and then, all of a sudden, [was] forced to live completely differently."

After Grandpa Mason grew accustomed to his home, Roche took in several foster kittens, and those new roommates completely altered Grandpa Mason's behavior. Roche expected him to hiss, swat, or growl at the kittens when they invaded his space, but he didn't. Instead, he allowed them to crawl all over him and appeared to enjoy it when they licked his ear. Suddenly a playful, affectionate, and gentle personality came out of Grandpa Mason as he played with, bathed, taught, and cared for the orphaned kittens that Roche welcomed into her home. Potentially due to the kittens' influence, Grandpa Mason surpassed his prognosis by more than two years.

During the last few years of his life, Grandpa Mason passed on important lessons and good manners to the kittens he looked after and adored, as a true grandfather should. He passed last September, but he spent his last night in his ultimate happy place: snuggling in his bed surrounded by kittens.

HOW TO STAY IN TOUCH WITH FAMILY AND FRIENDS WHILE FOLLOWING SOCIAL DISTANCING GUIDELINES

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention are encouraging communities across the U.S. to practice social distancing. While this will help prevent the spread of the coronavirus, or COVID-19, it also means that social interactions will be minimal. In addition to impeding many industries and businesses, this has significant impacts on families and friends who can no longer visit each other in person. Luckily, the technology we have today allows us to stay in touch while still practicing social responsibility.

SPRUCE UP EVERYDAY ACTIVITIES.

Hopping on the phone or your laptop to video chat is a great way to reach out and catch up with loved ones. While folding laundry or doing other mundane chores, give a friend or your parents a call to idly chat; it can make your tedious tasks much more enjoyable. Video calls are also beneficial if, for example, you're missing out on your daily workouts with a friend. Hop on a video chat to practice yoga, cardio, or other simple exercise routines together.

LET YOUR KIDS CHAT WITH FRIENDS.

Kids can benefit from video chatting by staying in touch with their friends while school and other activities are canceled. Letting your kids connect to social media is a pretty big step, so consider signing them up for Yoursphere or Kidzworld, kid-friendly networks that let them keep in touch with their friends while you can monitor their activity.

Get in touch with other parents to set up virtual play dates over video chats for your kids. They can even watch a movie or TV show together.

HOST A MOVIE NIGHT.

Speaking of movies, Netflix developed a unique way for people to watch movies and shows together: Netflix Party. If you have a desktop or laptop with a Chrome browser, visit NetflixParty.com to download the application. Once downloaded, open the movie or TV series you'd like to watch, create or join a "party," then relax and enjoy the show while chatting with friends.

These are only a few examples of how we can stay in touch during these concerning times. Talk with your family and friends and see what other creative ideas you can come up with together. Even though you may be apart from loved ones right now, virtual communication has never been easier or more plentiful.
